NON SEQUITUR - TEVECHOO

this is where the description of the zine should go ie how do you interact with this material and what is the intention of the arist.
honestly though i havent put quite too much thought into this.

i hope you find value in looking at these images and words over and over again and watch as they evolve and take shape in your own life. may this zine serve as a constant companion as you journey throughout your life :) if you'd like to chat, you can find me @tevechoo

the absolute tragedy of our visions

shark stuck in a laundry machine a screaming man stuck inside a TV a used cup of ramen floating on top a pool the more surreal the better The quaker oats man, but face swap his face with a horse a rat eating avocado toast fish too fat to fit in a fishbowl. a bus filled with jellyfish a person's mouth filled with candy a child triumphantly holding up a dead rat a tombstone with a gargoyle head on it a blowdryer with spaghetti coming out of its head. an egyptian vase with spaghetti leaking out of it above, but with purple ooze your face but without eyes, and has mouths for eyes. a treasure box with cats eyes all over it an open paint can, but with black squid eyes glinting out of it

I think I felt this tremendously large sense of anxiety while I was having dinner at the vegetarian indian place today, and I haven't been able to separate myself from it yet. There's a lot of things weighing on my chest atm. Do I truly belong here?

Turns out im just diarrheeing from the food.

i went to the beach today allowed the waves to crash into my feeble body, tossed around like a ragdoll floating in the wind, overwhelmed by the sheer force and majesty of the roaring of the waves. rejuvenated, replenished and resplendent.
